Dear Friends of the Southwest Symphony Orchestra,

I'm sometimes asked how season programs are determined. Like a spring garden, months of gestation take place with flowers finally appearing in full bloom. Coupled with some weeding, delightful surprises sprout along the way! A chance meeting with awarding-winning photographer Todd Gustafson is the inspiration behind our opening concert on September 29, "To the Ends of the Earth." Mr. Gustafson's acclaimed documentary of the same title - which has recently appeared on 150 PBS stations including WTTW - has been adapted specifically for a presentation with the SSO. The visual artist is also the composer, whose dynamic score is performed live, synchronized to awe inspiring video and photographic images! Included in the program is the premiere of Echoes of the Alps, featuring two alhorn soloists — not your everyday concert hall experience!

Another unique programming idea surfaced while I was jogging; that is to feature a program of orchestra members' favorites. On November 10 you can hear for yourself what some of them selected in our "Orchestra Musicians' Bucket List." Chances are you share their tastes!

"Holiday Gifts of Music" (not from Amazon!) find their way to St. Damian in Oak Forest on December 6 and to St. George in Tinley Park on December 8, when the SSO collaborates with their music ministries. These holiday outreach concerts are cherished by audiences and performers alike.

A tour de force is presented on March 22 when 100 singers, soloists and orchestra converge in "An Afternoon of Lerner and Loewe." You won't want to miss this extravaganza featuring music of Camelot, Gigi, Brigadoon, Paint Your Wagon, and My Fair Lady!

Because so many fabulous requests for pieces were submitted by SSO musicians for consideration, it seemed appropriate to include more of them in our final concert on May 3, "Youth Competition Winner & Musicians' Bucket List Sequel."

As you plan your outside entertainment for this coming year, we invite you to include the Southwest Symphony Orchestra by choosing a subscription option to our 2019-2020 season "Nature's Realm."

Warm regards,

David Crane, Music Director
